A Madman Still. HIS OWN STORY.

BY MRS. M. A. DENISON.

"Yes, sir, I was crazy for five years, raving crazy. But, bless my heart, you need not move away-I'm well enough now. Look in my eve-isn't its glance cool and steady? A madman couldn't look at you, in that way: no, not in that way. Before I wasborn, they say, my mother was crazy, so you see I in Agent Eina Insurance Company, herit the malady-not but what I'm cured of it now, you know. Why don't you answer? That roused the malady in me, I caught up a box in which was a costly glass, and threw it at his head. I was very sorry afterward, though, for when he got well he put medown cellar in the wine vault, and kept me there &c., &c., drawn and acknowledgments taken. a week without clothing or victuals. That was nothing, however, to me; I've gone years at a time without touching food. Well, the house in which I was born was large, and old and grand; I suspect it was Solomon's temple now, though I didn't know it then. I remember the angel's wings in the holy of holies; I took them off once, and put them on my own shoulders. You wouldn't believe me if I told you that I flew to the moon, now
